The library contains an original cast of Washington, from which Hondan's statue at Richmond is said to have been made, and a cast of Lafayette. Some of the Northern people now livin there may they have lost the romance they once had concerning Washington, for they learn directly from tradition that as a neighbour be was unsociable, haughty, very exacting, and quick-tempered. Something of this may true, but he had a worthless set of slaves to deal with hesi les, there were squatters through the woods who trespassed on his timber and fishing grounds, killed most of the deer he leied to keep. | O 10, 11, and 12, cuch containing 4 Rooms, and in various ways annoyed him, and it is not likely that they have handed down anything pleasant that he said of them. Something also is due to political feeling, for the Democrats charged him with being an aristocrat. The truth is he was a nema bo who paid the closest attention to his affairs, nothing that in any way concerned him escaped his attention, and he could ill bear unthrift and improvidence and depredation. Hence, when absent, his minute directions to No. 63, between Messrs John Bund & Co.'s

The tomb containing the remains of Washington and his wife is on a gentle declivity facing a wooded bill. The road runs by the side of a fence where old pear trees of the native variety stand, as in a hedge. Through an iron-grated door one sees his marble carcophagus, handsomely ornamented out he right, while hars quite plain, is on the left, and this is all. But when he came to Sparta, thinking there for his comming to be accounted a god, the good laws of Lycurgas and customs of the country were too strong for his diet. The governors banished him and his art, and all the inhabitants, following the stops of their predecessors, used not with dainties to provoke appetite, but with labour and travail to what their stomachs to treir meat "I may," says Stephen, "well liken Homer to Mithecus, and poets to cooks the pleaaures of the one winnes the body from labour, and conquereth the sense the allurement of the other draws the mind from virtue, and confoundeth wit."
